

CALL FOR PROPOSALS

“Inclusive ‘Built Back Better’: Mental Health Responses to COVID-19 phase II”.

I. BACKGROUND

In the summer of 2021, with support of the Open Society Foundation, the Pan African Network of Persons with Psychosocial Disabilities (PANPPD) launched its first micro-grants program for its member organizations with the aim to:

- raise awareness on the impact of COVID-19 on persons with psychosocial disabilities in Africa,
- identifying the main barriers encountered to the enjoyment of their right to mental health and full inclusion in their communities,
- carrying out advocacy to ensure that all health responses to COVID-19, including access to diagnostics and vaccines, are delivered following a human rights-based approach, that respects autonomy and dignity of the persons, while at the same time recognizing psychosocial support.

PANPPD members involved in the micro-grants program of Phase I have highlighted the worsening in the general wellbeing of persons with psychosocial disabilities, including facing alarming stigma and discrimination, even from family members. In Uganda and Ghana, most of the women with psychosocial disabilities were self-employed selling clothes and market products in the informal sector. Due to isolation measures and restrictions, these women lost all of their income and their limited capital was used to sustain essential expenses, preventing them from restarting their businesses after more than 1 year of lockdown. Despite some governments attempts to put in place post recovery programs to ‘build back better’ the country’s economic and employment situation, such as through the Emyoga and the National Disability grants in Uganda, persons with psychosocial disabilities have never been consulted nor included in these recovery programs, resulting in shortfalls in the efficacy of these programs to address their priorities. In Nigeria, Zambia, Malawi and Zimbabwe, PANPPD’s affiliates confirmed that access to health services during the COVID19 period remains a challenge and many have had health relapses. Both public officials and communities remain largely unaware of the socio and economic impact of the COVID19 pandemic on persons with psychosocial disability and on the urgent need for inclusive policies, developed in consultations with organisations of persons with psychosocial disabilities.

Hence, there is an urgent need for PANPPD and its members to continue gathering evidence and to strengthen collective advocacy for inclusive COVID19 responses and 'building back better' policies.

II. OVERVIEW

The PANPPD Inclusive 'Built Back Better': Mental Health Responses to COVID-19 Phase II Request for Proposals (RFP) envisages the continuation of previous microgrants to leverage the momentum created in Phase I as well as the establishment of new ones. It aims to continue the support to national/local advocacy campaigns from PANPPD members from across Africa to raise awareness on the social and economic challenges precipitated by the Covid-19 pandemic for persons with psychosocial disabilities and to advocate for responses to COVID-19 and for "building back better" policies and programs that are inclusive, human rights- and community based, and that include psychosocial support and other alternatives to the medical model as a key component.

These campaign strategies may be related to:

- Advocate for ways to ensure the right to health, employment, and education of persons with psychosocial disabilities during the COVID-19 pandemic.
- Advocate for the development of effective mechanisms to support persons with psychosocial disabilities who have fallen behind Covid-19 disruption.
- Advocate for improving health care delivery systems for individuals who are unsheltered during the pandemic.
- Raise awareness, including through social media, on preventative health behaviors.
- Advocate for the need to adequate budget allocation to rebuild social and health system in an inclusive manner.
- Raise stakeholders' attention to best practices on alternatives to bio-medical interventions, particularly in the COVID-19 context.

This list is not exhaustive: any proposal that explores cross-disability partnerships at national level, potential advocacy strategies towards relevant healthcare, disaster management and emergency responses, that support the development of inclusive recovery response plans of low-income communities in the wake of the Covid-19 pandemic and contributes to PANPPD mission of ensuring that the existing support and exclusion gaps are addressed are welcome.
